

Fulton Financial Planning, Inc

Deidra Fulton, CFP
5068 W Plano Parkway, Ste 300
Plano, TX 75093
972-248-3807
df@FultonFinancialPlanning.com
www.FultonFinancialPlanning.com

Hi Everyone,

We're at mid-year 2016 . . . can you believe it?

Mid-year marks a great time to assess progress on your financial goals for the year. If you're on track, congratulate yourself! If you've fallen behind, there's still time for taking corrective steps. Or perhaps your priorities may have changed from earlier in the year; if that's the case, then make sure your highest priority efforts are addressing your top goals.

We hope you find these articles informative. Give us a call if we can assist you in addressing your financial issues.

Warm regards,
Deidra

follow me on Twitter
@DeidraFulton

July 2016

Mid-Year 2016: An Investment Reality Check
Should You Buy or Lease Your Next Vehicle?
Finding and Claiming Forgotten Funds
Can I make charitable contributions from my IRA in 2016?

Financial Briefs

Guidance For Every Stage of Life

Mid-Year 2016: An Investment Reality Check

Market volatility is alive and well in 2016. Low oil prices, China's slowing growth, the prospect of rising interest rates, the strong U.S. dollar, global conflicts--all of these factors have contributed to turbulent markets this year.

Many investors may be tempted to review their portfolios only when the markets hit a rough patch, but careful planning is essential in all economic climates. So whether the markets are up or down, reviewing your portfolio with your financial professional can be an excellent way to keep your investments on track, and midway through the year is a good time for a reality check. Here are three questions to consider.

1. How are my investments doing?

Review a summary of your portfolio's total return (minus all fees) and compare the performance of each asset class against a relevant benchmark. For stocks, you might compare performance against the S&P 500, Russell 2000, or Global Dow; for mutual funds, you might use the Lipper indexes. (Keep in mind that the performance of an unmanaged index is not indicative of the performance of any specific security, and you can't invest directly in an unmanaged index.)

Consider any possible causes of over- or underperformance in each asset class. If any over- or underperformance was concentrated in a single asset class or investment, was that consistent with the asset's typical behavior over time? Or was recent performance an anomaly that bears watching or taking action? In addition, make sure you know the total fees you are paying (e.g., mutual fund expense ratios, transaction fees), preferably as a dollar amount and not just as a percentage of assets.

2. Is my investment strategy on track?

Review your financial goals (e.g., retirement, college, house, car, vacation fund) and market outlook for the remainder of the year to determine whether your investment asset mix for each goal continues to meet your time frame, risk tolerance, and overall needs. Of course, no one knows exactly what the markets will do in the future, but by looking at current conditions, you might identify factors that could influence the markets in the months ahead--things like inflation, interest rates, and economic growth projections from the Federal Reserve. With this broader perspective, you can then update your investment strategy as necessary.

Remember, even if you've chosen an appropriate asset allocation strategy for various goals, market forces may have altered your mix without any action on your part. For example, maybe your target was 70% stocks and 30% bonds, but now you have 80% stocks and 20% bonds. To return your asset mix back to its original allocation, you may want to rebalance your investments. This can be done by selling investments and transferring the proceeds to underrepresented asset classes, or simply by directing new contributions into asset classes that have been outpaced by others. Keep in mind that rebalancing may result in commission costs, as well as taxes if you sell investments for a profit.

Asset allocation does not guarantee a profit or protect against loss; it is a method used to help manage investment risk.

3. Am I maximizing my tax savings?

Taxes can take a significant bite out of your overall return. You can't control the markets, but you can control the accounts you use to save and invest, as well as the assets you choose to hold in those accounts. Consider the "tax efficiency" of your investment portfolio. Certain types of investments tend to result in larger tax bills. For example, investments that generate interest or produce short-term capital gains are taxed as ordinary income, which is usually a higher rate than long-term capital gains. Dividing assets strategically among taxable, tax-deferred, and tax-exempt accounts may help reduce the effect of taxes on your overall portfolio.

All investing involves risk, including the loss of principal, and there can be no guarantee that any investing strategy will be successful.

Should You Buy or Lease Your Next Vehicle?

After declining dramatically a few years ago, auto sales are up, leasing offers are back, and incentives and deals abound. So if you're in the market for a new vehicle, should you buy it or lease it? To decide, you'll need to consider how each option fits into your lifestyle and your budget. This chart shows some points to compare.

Buying or leasing tips

- Shop wisely. Advertised deals may be too good to be true once you read the fine print. To qualify for the deal, you may need to meet certain requirements, or pay more money up front.
- To get the best deal, be prepared to negotiate the price of the vehicle and the terms of any loan or lease offer.
- Read any contract you're asked to sign, and make sure you understand any terms or conditions.
- Calculate both the short-term and long-term costs associated with each option.

	Buying considerations	Leasing considerations
Ownership	When the vehicle is paid for, it's yours. You can keep it as long as you want, and any retained value (equity) is yours to keep.	You don't own the car--the leasing company does. You must return the vehicle at the end of the lease or choose to buy it at a predetermined residual value; you have no equity.
Monthly payments	You will have a monthly payment if you finance it; the payment will vary based on the amount financed, the interest rate, and the loan term.	When comparing similar vehicles with equal costs, the monthly payment for a lease is typically significantly lower than a loan payment. This may enable you to drive a more expensive vehicle.
Mileage	Drive as many miles as you want; a vehicle with higher mileage, though, may be worth less when you trade in or sell your vehicle.	Your lease will spell out how many miles you can drive before excess mileage charges apply (typical mileage limits range from 12,000 to 15,000).
Maintenance	When you sell your vehicle, condition matters, so you may receive less if it hasn't been well maintained. As your vehicle ages, repair bills may be greater, something you generally won't encounter if you lease.	You generally have to service the vehicle according to the manufacturer's recommendations. You'll also need to return your vehicle with normal wear and tear (according to the leasing company's definition), so you may be charged for dents and scratches that seem insignificant.
Up-front costs	These may include the total negotiated cost of the vehicle (or a down payment on that cost), taxes, title, and insurance.	Inception fees may include an acquisition fee, a capitalized cost reduction amount (down payment), security deposit, first month's payment, taxes, and title fees.
Value	You'll need to consider resale value. All vehicles depreciate, but some depreciate faster than others. If you decide to trade in or sell the vehicle, any value left will be money in your pocket, so it may pay off to choose a vehicle that holds its value.	A vehicle that holds its value is generally less expensive to lease because your payment is based on the predicted depreciation. And because you're returning it at the end of the lease, you don't need to worry about owning a depreciating asset.
Insurance	If your vehicle is financed, the lien holder may require you to carry a certain amount of insurance; otherwise, the amount of insurance you'll need will depend on personal factors and state insurance requirements.	You'll be required to carry a certain amount of insurance, sometimes more than if you bought the vehicle. Many leases require GAP insurance that covers the difference between an insurance payout and the vehicle's value if your vehicle is stolen or totaled. GAP insurance may be included in the lease.
The end of the road	You may want to sell or trade in the vehicle, but the timing is up to you. If you want, you can keep the vehicle for many years, or sell it whenever you need the cash.	At the end of the lease, you must return the vehicle or opt to buy it according to the lease terms. Returning the vehicle early may be an option, but it's likely you'll pay a hefty fee to do so. If you still need a vehicle, you'll need to start the leasing (or buying) process all over.

Do you have a tax refund waiting for you?

Each year, millions of dollars in tax refunds go unclaimed. In March 2016, the IRS announced that it was holding $950 million in unclaimed refunds as a result of taxpayers failing to file a federal income tax return for 2012. (Source: IR-2016-38, March 10, 2016)

You may have missed out on a potential tax refund because you earned income and had taxes withheld but weren't required to file a tax return, or if you were eligible for refundable tax credits (where the amount of the credit you qualify for exceeds the amount of tax you owe). Even if you did file a tax return, your refund may have been undeliverable if your address was incorrect.

For more information on finding and claiming missing federal income tax refunds, visit irs.gov.

Finding and Claiming Forgotten Funds

As a child, you may have dreamed about finding buried treasure, but you probably realized at an early age that it was unlikely you would discover a chest full of pirate booty. However, the possibility that you have unclaimed funds or other assets waiting for you is not a fantasy.

According to the National Association of Unclaimed Property Administrators (NAUPA), $41.7 billion is waiting to be returned by state unclaimed property programs. So how do you find what is owed to you, even if it's not a fortune?

State unclaimed property programs

Every state has an unclaimed property program that requires companies and financial institutions to turn account assets over to the state if they have lost contact with the rightful owner for one year or longer (such as when the account has been inactive). It then becomes the state's responsibility to locate the owner. State-held property generally can be claimed in perpetuity by original owners and heirs.

For state programs, unclaimed property might include the following:

- Financial accounts
- Stocks
- Uncashed dividend or payroll checks
- Utility deposits
- Insurance payments and policies
- Trust distributions
- Mineral royalty payments
- Contents of safe-deposit boxes

To see whether you have unclaimed assets, you may have to search your state's database and the databases of states where you formerly lived or worked. It's possible that funds or assets are still waiting for you even if you moved away years ago. Fortunately, most states participate in a national database that you can search for free at MissingMoney.com.

Finding "lost" life insurance policies might take some legwork. Life insurance companies that can't locate a beneficiary must generally turn over benefits from an individual policy to state unclaimed property programs, but might not do so if the company does not know that the policy owner has passed away. If you believe that a family member owned life insurance but can't find the physical policy, you may need to look for evidence of it by searching personal records and files (assuming you have the authority to do so) or by contacting the policy owner's insurance agent, attorney, or other financial professionals.

Federal unclaimed property programs

The federal government also tracks unclaimed property, including:

- Tax refunds
- Pension funds
- Funds from failed banks and credit unions
- Funds owed investors from U.S. SEC enforcement cases
- Refunds from FHA-insured mortgages
- Unredeemed savings bonds that are no longer earning interest

Unlike states, the federal government does not have a central website for finding unclaimed money or assets, so you'll need to check a number of sources, including one of the biggest sources of unclaimed funds--the IRS--at irs.gov. To find out more about other federal programs that may hold unclaimed property, visit the NAUPA website, unclaimed.org.

Submitting a claim

To claim property, follow the instructions given, which will vary by the type of asset and where the property is held. You'll need to verify ownership, typically by providing information about yourself (such as your Social Security number and proof of address), and submit a claim form either online or by mail.

What if the listed property owner is deceased? A claim may be made by a survivor and will be payable according to state or federal law. For life insurance, you may need the full name and Social Security number of the deceased individual, a copy of the death certificate, and in some cases proof that you were the named beneficiary.

Be careful

Private companies may be paid to locate rightful owners and/or offer to help rightful owners obtain property for a fee, but legitimate companies will ask you to pay only after you receive your property. State laws limit fees companies charge, so check with your state before you sign any agreement. However, in most cases you should be able to find the same property for free by checking state or federal databases. Carefully check out anyone who contacts you, because some scammers will claim to have property or represent that they are from a government agency in order to obtain other information about you or your finances. For more information about protecting yourself, visit the Federal Trade Commission's consumer information site, consumer.ftc.gov.

Fulton Financial Planning, Inc

Deidra Fulton, CFP
5068 W Plano Parkway, Ste 300
Plano, TX 75093
972-248-3807
df@FultonFinancialPlanning.com
www.FultonFinancialPlanning.com

This newsletter strives to provide factual and up-to-date information on the topics discussed, but it should not be regarded as a complete discussion of these issues. The reader is advised to engage the services of a competent professional before taking action on any subject matter discussed.

Can I make charitable contributions from my IRA in 2016?

Yes, if you qualify. The law authorizing qualified charitable distributions, or QCDs, has recently been made permanent by the Protecting Americans from Tax Hikes (PATH) Act of 2015.

You simply instruct your IRA trustee to make a distribution directly from your IRA (other than a SEP or SIMPLE) to a qualified charity. You must be 70½ or older, and the distribution must be one that would otherwise be taxable to you. You can exclude up to $100,000 of QCDs from your gross income in 2016. And if you file a joint return, your spouse (if 70½ or older) can exclude an additional $100,000 of QCDs. But you can't also deduct these QCDs as a charitable contribution on your federal income tax return--that would be double dipping.

QCDs count toward satisfying any required minimum distributions (RMDs) that you would otherwise have to take from your IRA in 2016, just as if you had received an actual distribution from the plan. However, distributions (including RMDs) that you actually receive from your IRA and subsequently transfer to a charity cannot qualify as QCDs.

For example, assume that your RMD for 2016 is $25,000. In June 2016, you make a $15,000 QCD to Qualified Charity A. You exclude the $15,000 QCD from your 2016 gross income. Your $15,000 QCD satisfies $15,000 of your $25,000 RMD. You'll need to withdraw another $10,000 (or make an additional QCD) by December 31, 2016, to avoid a penalty.

You could instead take a distribution from your IRA and then donate the proceeds to a charity yourself, but this would be a bit more cumbersome and possibly more expensive. You'd include the distribution in gross income and then take a corresponding income tax deduction for the charitable contribution. But the additional tax from the distribution may be more than the charitable deduction due to IRS limits. QCDs avoid all this by providing an exclusion from income for the amount paid directly from your IRA to the charity--you don't report the IRA distribution in your gross income, and you don't take a deduction for the QCD. The exclusion from gross income for QCDs also provides a tax-effective way for taxpayers who don't itemize deductions to make charitable contributions.

Can I name a charity as beneficiary of my IRA?

Yes, you can name a charity as beneficiary of your IRA, but be sure to understand the advantages and disadvantages.

Generally, a spouse, child, or other individual you designate as beneficiary of a traditional IRA must pay federal income tax on any distribution received from the IRA after your death. By contrast, if you name a charity as beneficiary, the charity will not have to pay any income tax on distributions from the IRA after your death (provided that the charity qualifies as a tax-exempt charitable organization under federal law), a significant tax advantage.

After your death, distributions of your assets to a charity generally qualify for an estate tax charitable deduction. In other words, if a charity is your sole IRA beneficiary, the full value of your IRA will be deducted from your taxable estate for purposes of determining the federal estate tax (if any) that may be due. This can also be a significant advantage if you expect the value of your taxable estate to be at or above the federal estate tax exclusion amount ($5,450,000 for 2016).

Of course, there are also nontax implications. If you name a charity as sole beneficiary of your IRA, your family members and other loved ones will obviously not receive any benefit from those IRA assets when you die. If you would like to leave some of your assets to your loved ones and some assets to charity, consider leaving your taxable retirement funds to charity and other assets to your loved ones. This may offer the most tax-efficient solution, because the charity will not have to pay any tax on the retirement funds.

If retirement funds are a major portion of your assets, another option to consider is a charitable remainder trust (CRT). A CRT can be structured to receive the funds free of income tax at your death, and then pay a (taxable) lifetime income to individuals of your choice. When those individuals die, the remaining trust assets pass to the charity. Finally, another option is to name the charity and one or more individuals as co-beneficiaries. (Note: There are fees and expenses associated with the creation of trusts.)

The legal and tax issues discussed here can be quite complex. Be sure to consult an estate planning attorney for further guidance.